

Mar-Jet Gardening.
In the neighborhood of cities and large villages market gardening offers advantages to those adapted to the business. But not more than one man in twenty will make a success of market gardening, because only in that proportion are individuals adapted to that sort of work. The same is true of the poultry business and bee keeping. But there are certain lines which form a sort of common ground. Among these is the keeping of cows for the manufacture of butter and cheese on the associated plan, or where there is a wide-awake, intelligent, strong wife to over see and bear a hand herself in the manipulation of the milk, the private dairy method offers advantages over the associated plan, when one selects his customers, and secures prices way up because his product is at the same altitude.

He knew nothing about his clothes, and a new suit was purchased for him, but as soon as they were placed on him he ceased to act rational, and in a short time tore them from his person, and is now a raving maniac. No Further Use for It.

An impassable gulf yawned between the heart of the man and the low wicker chair by the window, while he leaned moodily against the mantel. It was not a large apartment, but the gulf between their hearts could not have been less than 14 feet in width as the crow flies.

There were tears in his voice as he spoke.

"I can never"—

By a supreme exercise of muscular activity he swallowed a few sobs.

"—love another."

"Then"—

Her hands were twined tightly together.

"If you speak truly, I don't see that you have any further use for this large diamond ring."

After the interchange of the conventional civilities usual upon such occasions he withdrew.—Detroit Tribune.

His Signs Misunderstood.

"I would not have broken my pledge," said a backsliding tippler recently, "but for an infernally stupid barkeeper."

"The man was stone deaf," he continued, "and I had grown tired of drinking sarsaparilla and ginger ale. I wanted a lemonade and tried to order it, but couldn't make him understand."

"He talked to me in the mute language, and I tried to answer him and made signs of mixing a drink with a shaker. He nodded and smiled and made me a milk punch."

"I didn't want to hurt his feelings, nor admit any inability to understand him. So I drank the milk punch, and made more signs for a lemonade, but some how or other I always got milk punches. That unsettled me and that is how I broke all my promises."—N. Y. Herald.

A Widely Prevalent Malady.

While it is perfectly true that swamp vapors, morning and evening mists along the banks of slow winding, turbid streams, and the effluvia exhaled by the sun from moist and decaying vegetable matter, frequently break out where no such conditions exist. It is, in fact, a malady widely prevalent, of which it is impossible to discover the origin.

But though its causes are often obscure, the testimony, professional and public, of the inhabitants of America and other lands, leaves no reasonable doubt not only that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters uproots this tenacious disease when fully developed but fortifies the system against its first attacks. Chills and fever, bilious intermittents, dumb ague and ague ally yield to it. Liver trouble, always present in malarial disorder, dyspepsia, constipation and kidney complaint succumb to the Bitters.

Regiments of riflemen were organized in Germany during the thirty years' war.

Same Thing.

An Irishman went to a lawyer with a case, but the attorney wanted a retainer. The Irishman was poor, and finally the lawyer said he would take the case on a contingent fee. It was settled, says an exchange, but the contingent-fee part of the agreement bothered the client. He confided his ignorance to his friend, Paddy, and asked for an explanation. "An't it is the meanin' of a contingent fee yer after knowin'?" Sure, I'll tell ye. A contingent fee means that if ye lose the case the lawyer gets nothin'; if ye win ye get it nothin'.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure has the power to cure the most obstinate and most painful cases of this disease. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Grapes.

When you buy a basket of grapes, look them carefully over at once. Remove all cracked ones to a jar, throwing away the fermented ones. The cracked ones may be used for tart or sauce, but if left on the bunch would soon spoil the others. In all market fruits much may be saved this way.

The Queen as an Entertainer.

A good story is told of one of Princess Christian's children. During some tableaux-vivants at Windsor, the child, who was very much bored, said to her majesty, "Oh, grandma, I'm tired of this. What are they doing it for?"

"To amuse me, my dear," replied the queen. "The royal youngster gazed at her majesty for a moment and then inquired gravely, 'But when are you going to amuse us?'"—London Illustrated News.

Cream of Tartar and Soda

Have uses in cooking well known to every housekeeper; but the method of refining them to make them chemically pure, and of mixing them together so as to produce their greatest leavening power and best results when combined, is a matter of great exactness, requiring the most expert knowledge and skill.

Royal Baking Powder

Is the product of this knowledge and experience and the expenditure of many thousands of dollars in patents and appliances for its preparation. It is a compound of strictly pure grape cream of tartar and absolutely pure soda, combined with exactness and care by famous chemists, and it will produce more wholesome and delicate bread, biscuit, cake, rolls, etc., than can be had where this modern agent of cooking is not used.

Beware of the cheap compounds called baking powders to catch the unwary. They are made with alum and are poisonous.

THE VISION OF BIRDS.

It is often Microscopic and More Acute Than Man's.

Birds have very acute vision, perhaps the most acute of any creature, and the sense is also more widely diffused over the retina than in the case with man; consequently a bird can see sideways as well as objects in front of it. A bird sees—showing great uneasiness in consequence—a hawk long before it is visible to man; so, too, fowls and pigeons find minute scraps of food, distinguishing them from what appear to us exactly similar pieces of earth or gravel.

Young chickens are also able to find their own food—knowing its position and how distinct it is—as soon as they are hatched, whereas a child only very gradually learns either to see or understand the distance of objects. Several birds—apparently the young of all those that nest on the ground—can see quite well directly they come out of the shell, but the young of the birds that nest in trees or on rocks are born blind, and have to be fed.

An Oyster Salad.

An oyster salad, tested and vouched for by a correspondent of the New York Times, is made as follows: Allow six oysters to each person, parboil them in their own liquor and drain immediately. When cool, cut each into four bits. Break the tender young leaves of lettuce, never using a knife, as cutting destroys the freshness, and mix in equal parts with the oysters. Pour over the whole the following dressing: Allow an egg to every two persons. Boil 30 minutes, and when cold cut the whites into dice and mix with the oysters and lettuce. Put the yolks in a deep dish, mash or pound fine, and add a raw yolk. Stir olive oil in slowly until the mixture is a smooth paste. Season with lemon juice, English mustard and salt. Then add more oil until the quantity desired is reached.

Like Father Like Son.

A young man returned home a few days ago from a trip to South Africa for his health and in narrating his adventures to his father he told him he had bought a silver mine for $5,000. "I knew they'd swindle you," exclaimed the old man. "So you were fool enough to buy a humbug mine?"

"Yes; but I didn't lose anything." I formed a company and sold half the stock to a Londoner for $6,500.

"You did?" gasped the old man, as he turned white. "I'll bet I'm the one who bought it." "I know you are," coolly observed the young man, as he crossed his legs and tried to appear very much at home.

Fashion Echoes.

The tendency to our skirts appears to be no the increase.

The newest veils are black, with dots or border of white.

The richer kinds of dress materials have never been more exquisite in weave and color than now.

Many of the newest Paris models are now cut with the long shoulder seam and sleeves below the shoulder point for day as well as evening wear.

Velvet has resumed its sway, even to the extent of making whole gowns of it, while in combination with wool and silk it is the favorite decoration for both gowns and mantles.

Mercury trimmings, valkyrie garniture of marvelous wings, spangled stuffs, jet and steel are employed in millinery, together with velvet roses and mink or sable bands or tails.

A Criticism Staved Off.

Mr. C. K. Tuckerman records an instance in which Charles Sumner neatly evaded a tact criticism from Macaulay. It was at a London dinner-party, when one of the guests asked the American where Washington's body was buried. "His ashes," replied Sumner, somewhat sententiously, "repose on the banks of the Potomac." "His ashes?" said Macaulay, who was present; "was his body buried?" "No," replied Sumner, who perceived the intended satire: "it was buried, like the forefathers of the hamlet, and like them, in his ashes he lies his wonted fires."

Bottling Tears.

So custom of bottling tears is peculiar to the people of Persia. There it constitutes an important part of the obsequies of the dead. As the mourners are sitting round and weeping, the master of the ceremonies presents each one with a piece of cotton, wool or sponge with which to wipe away the tears. This cotton, wool or sponge is afterward squeezed into a bottle, and the tears are preserved as a powerful and efficacious restorative for those whom every other medicine has failed to revive. It is to this custom that allusion is made in Psalms LVI, 8: "Put thou my tears into thy bottle."—Brooklyn Eagle.

More Gate Than Village.

A tourist has visited a small historic town. He was shown the massive wall that surrounded it, and the immense town gates. "You need to be very careful," he said, gravely, to the official who was his escort. "Why so?" "Sometime when these gates are open the village may get lost."
